The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

TVA Experimentings.

Reading the management section of the TVA annual report made us wonder whether bold experimentation in personnel matters isn't what our Federal Government needs more than anything else.

Endowed by law with a large degree of corporate independence, the TVA probably exercises greater discretionary powers than any other Federal agency. Although exempted from civil service requirements, the Authority comes as close to being spoilsproof as any agency this side of Mars. In its short existence the Authority has set a new record for constructive personnel work.

In the last fiscal year, for example, an employe relationship policy was worked out at conferences between the management and employe representatives through which not only was the right of workers to organize and bargain collectively recognized but, a court of appeals created for adjusting grievances.

More than one Member of Congress has been known to remark that a letter from a Congressman is a handicap to a person seeking a position with the TVA and the Authority continues to select its workers according to the most rigid standards. To facilitate promotions and transfers the Authority keeps a complete, up-to-date dossier on every worker.

Health service is also italicized under TVA administration. The examination given an employe before being hired is followed up by periodic examinations and sanitary supervision of workers' living and working conditions. This increased emphasis on health service has paid dividends to Uncle Sam. The number of days lost per 1,000 men has dropped from 5.85 in 1934 to 3.2 last year.

Innumerable other examples of TVA experimentings could be cited such as a new filing system, research studies on fatigue, job training and the flow of work; all because the TVA administrators have set out to show the country not only that the economic life of an entire region but also that Government personnel policies can be planned.

TVA's feud with the General Accounting Office on the type of audit the GAO should make of the TVA books still rages, according to the report, and relief probably will be asked of Congress.

Ag Pamphlets.

There will be more than 800 illustrations in the new series of ten graphic pamphlets summarizing the data in the 1930 and 1935 agricultural censuses about to go to press. The pamphlet series will take the place of the single volume graphic smmary last published on the basis of the 1925 census and which contained less than 200 illustrations.

The whole project is under the direction of Dr. O. E. Baker, who has written five of the ten pamphlets himself and is co-author of two others. Besides Baker, those working on the series include H. A. Turner, J. C. Folsom, Donald Jackson, B. R. Storber, A. B. Genung, D. L. Wickens and N. J. Wall.

That series of lectures by bureau heads on "Objectives of the Department of Agriculture" are to be mimeographed and distributed free by the Agriculture Graduate School. The school also plans to reproduce its forthcoming series of lectures on economics and law.

Postals.

Roughly 400 temporary workers at the Bureau of Census have been given dismissal notices because of completion of the Agriculture census and a large portion of the work on the manufactures and business census . . . Dr. Malcolm Bryant, University of Georgia professor of economics, just added to the staff of the Federal Reserve Board's division of research and statistics, would make a good hero for a Horatio Alger success story, having worked his way through school. . . .

St. Elizabeth's Lodge No. 28, will celebrate the fifty-fourth anniversary of the passage of the civil service act with a meeting January 12 in Hitchcock Hall at the hospital . . . New officers of the lodge will be installed . . . The Social Security Board Union is seeking a promotion agreement similar to that signed by NLRB officials . . .

More than 300,000 farmers help in some way in getting out the Bureau of Agricultural Economics monthly crop reports . . . Fruit consumption is increasing . . . If you're an average man or woman you eat five pounds of lemons a year . . .

Miners Will Let Industry Set Code

The United Mine Workers were said in well-informed quarters last night to be willing to let the soft coal industry write the marketing provisions in a new Guffey control bill.

The union's position was disclosed as the Nation's leading bituminous producers headed toward White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., to discuss regulatory legislation today.

John L. Lewis, president of the union, has let these producers know that any marketing provisions satisfactory to them will receive full union support, if only they assure the industry sufficient income to keep up wages.

The new legislation, to be introduced by Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, will be designed to supplant the Guffey coal control act outlawed by the Supreme Court last winter.

Legal Fraternity Meets Here Today

First day's session will consist of registration, general tours of inspection of the Capital and a smoker, in the Mayflower ballroom.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock the delegates and visitors will be taken through the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

British Urged By Hadassah To Aid Jewry

Anti-Semitism Spread Is Shown; Officers Are Elected.

Delegates to the thirteenth annual convention of Junior Hadassah, Young Women's Zionist organization meeting in Washington the past four days, yesterday passed a resolution urging the British Royal Commission now investigating conditions in Palestine to make recommendations that will "facilitate the constructive building of Palestine for all sections of the population."

The resolution, which will be sent to the Jewish agency for submission to the board of inquiry, calls attention to the spread of anti-Semetism throughout the world, making the need for a refuge for "harassed Jews" more urgent.

Charging that the mandatory government has given insufficient co-operation to the Jews in their effort to develop Palestine, the resolution asks the commission to consider "the implications of the pledge contained in the Balfour Declaration and the mandates to facilitate the establishment of a national Jewish homeland in Palestine."

Sessions Are Concluded.

The 4-day convention, attended by 1,000 delegates from 40 States, closed last night with the election of officers for the coming year. Miss Mildred F. Murnick, of Philadelphia, was re-elected national president; Miss Pauline Englander, of Jersey City, N. J., was re-elected vice-president, and other vice presidents placed in office were Miss Sara Turner, of Chicago, Miss Tama Gutoff, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Miss Tessa Polasky, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Miss Ann Kaplan, of New York, N. Y., was made treasurer, and Miss Leah Lintz, of Philadelphia, was re-elected secretary.

The convention voted to establish a $1,000 scholarship fund in honor of Miss Alice L. Seligsberg, of New York, one of the first members of Senior Hadassah and for many years an adviser for Junior Hadassah. The scholarship will be awarded triennially to an applicant living in Palestine for study in the Henrietta Szold School of Nursing.

At a luncheon meeting yesterday Mrs. Samuel Schulsinger, national board member of Senior Hadassah, outlined plans for a campaign to obtain contributions from 1,000,000 Jews in the United States for the rebuilding of Palestine. She urged all Zionists in America to "pay the shekel," a tax to support the organization's activities throughout the world.

Seeks 1,000,000 Payers.

"This year the Zionist organization, under the auspices of the United States Central Shekel Board, is launching an extensive campaign with a goal of enlisting 1,000,000 shekel payers," she said. "This campaign must become a mobilization of Jewish public opinion for Zionist action. In this, the Zionist organization will demonstrate to the world its inflexible determination to carry forward with the work of building Palestine in the face of all obstacles and difficulties."

Mrs. Schulsinger announced that this year, for the first time, the Senior and Junior Hadassahs will vote on a slate of delegates from their own ranks, without affiliation with any other Zionist group, to represent them at the World Zionist Congress to be held next August in Switzerland.

The annual report of the treasurer of Junior Hadassah read yesterday, indicated that Junior Hadassah had raised $80,800 during the fiscal year ended July 1, 1936, for work in Palestine and for administration and education in the United States. Of this amount $63,000 was sent to Palestine for the support of three Hadassah educational institutions there.

The convention, in its closing session last night, adopted resolutions congratulating Justice Brandeis on his eightieth birthday, and Miss Henrietta Szold, who recently celebrated her seventy-ninth birthday.

Cycle Policeman Dies of Injuries

Motorcycle Policeman Ernest J. Grisett, 29, attached to the Traffic Bureau, died late last night in Walter Reed Hospital of a fractured skull and internal injuries suffered December 23 when he swerved his motorcycle to avoid a collision, and it overturned at Fifth and Concord streets.

His death brought the District's traffic toll for 1936 to 99. Since the accident he had not regained consciousness. The driver of the automobile he avoided striking was not held, but it is understood he will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Grisett, who lived at 7011 Ninth street northwest, was married but had no children. He became a motorcycle policeman on November 1, 1933.

Friends Deny Hoover May Buy Eastern Home

Philadelphia, Dec. 28 (AP).—A city real estate agent said tonight Herbert Hoover is negotiating for the purchase of a suburban Philadelphia estate, but close friends of the former President declared there was "nothing to it."

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, since leaving the White House in 1933, have resided at their Stanford University home in Palo Alto, Calif.

Had to Oppose Sunday Liquor or Lose Self-Respect

John R. O'Neal, who testified at the Commissioners' hearing yesterday, is pictured in action. He said he came to oppose the bill to permit liquor consumption on Sundays "or lose my self respect."

Sunday Liquor Bill Seems Doomed as Drys Score Measure Before D. C. Commissioners

but that a change in Saturday closing hours would remedy "a very bad condition." The hotel group, in a letter to the Commissioners, approved of local liquor laws "as they now stand."

Main opposition to the bill came from churchmen, reform leaders and temperance groups. Led by Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Federation of Churches, more than a score of these witnesses testified.

Explaining he came to the hearing prepared to refute testimony favoring the bill, LaRoe started the opposition battle by pointing out that public sentiment "is not represented by restaurant owners and bartenders.

"The people of the District appreciate what the Commissioners are trying to do," he said. "The people feel the Commissioners and the A. B. C. Board are trying to do a good job. The liquor interests themselves feel that if liquor is going to be sold, administration of liquor laws must be reasonable."

Farm Plan Praised.

Estimating that 15,000 "drunks" are arrested in Washintgon every year, LaRoe said to repeatedly throw them in jail was not an "intelligent" way to handle the problem. He lauded Commissioner Hazen's plan for a farm for persons addicted to the use of intoxicants.

"I ask the Commisioners to oppose this bill and report there is no public support," LaRoe concluded.

Edward G. Potter, representing the Forest Hills Citizens Association, pointed out that liquor consumers have six days during the week in which to supply themselves with intoxicants "if they must drink on Sunday." His views were upheld by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, of the Women's Council, Federation of Churches; Dr. F. F. Ellison, of the United Dry Forces, and W. C. T. U. leaders.

H. N. Pringle, of the International Reform Federation, pleaded for a "fair chance" for Sunday observance.

John R. O'Neal, a retired farmer, said he came to the meeting to oppose the bill "or lose my self-respect." Anyone who comes here to destroy the Sabbath, he said, "comes like the reds of Russia."

Dry Forces United.

Among others who registered opposition to the Dirksen measure were R. H. Miller, executive committee, Federation of Churches; Mrs. Simon McKinney, Parkview Citizens Association; Mrs. A. L. Baldwin, Chevy Chase W. C. T. U.; the Rev. R. W. Brooks, Interdenominational Ministers Alliance; Mrs. H. F. Stevens, president of the Gospel Mission, and numerous others.

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal gave brief descriptions of each bill as it was called for consideration. Following the liquor discussion, he presented a proposed amendment to the District Law Code strengthening gambling laws and providing for control of the "numbers" racket. Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward Thomas, assigned as head of a committee to draft adequate legislation, briefly discussed the measure and its provisions. There was no opposition.

Commissioner Hazen's proposal to establish a farm for the care and treatment of habitual drunkards was called next and met a stumbling block in the form of John B. Hammond, of the united dry forces. Hammond contended that if the sale of liquor was stopped there would be no need for the proposed farm.

Lunacy Bill Discussed.

At this point, William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, was granted permission to speak on four bills scheduled for consideration at the meeting—a bill to establish a mental health committee to handle lunacy cases, a bill revamping the local Juvenile Court system, a bill relative to qualifications of law practitioners and a bill to authorizing a study and report on the need of a subway in Washington.

There is growing need for modification of local lunacy procedings, Roberts said. He advocated a "humanized" method of dealing with the mentally ill. Roberts said the time had come for a law requiring that lawyers be licensed. At present, he said, it is possible for anyone to "hang up a shingle" and practice law without being a member of the bar.

The bill providing for revamping of the Juvenile Court system, he said, is now in shape to be presented to Congress. He talked at length on the proposed subway survey.

Subway "Only Answer."

"By 1950," Roberts said, "it has been estimated that Washington's population will be 1,000,000. Now is the time to look to the future and provide solution to the mass transportation problem. A subway is the only answer."

The subway bill calls for an appropriation of $25,000 for the survey and report. Roberts said it was "worth it if it costs $50,000."

Although Thomas Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and representatives of the Women's Bar Association advocated certain minor changes in the Juvenile Court bill, they indorsed the purpose and urged its early enactment.

The measure relating to qualifications of local lawyers has already passed the Senate and received approval of legal authorities. It provides for all District attorneys to be members of the local bar before establishing a general law practice.

John M. Savage, who said he represented the American Equity Association, opposed the lawyers' bill on grounds that in its present form it was not approved by Senate leaders. He said the bill had been changed since its consideration on Capitol Hill and was "full of jokers."

Public Needs Protection.

"The public needs protection from the lawyers, not a law to protect them," he said.

All discussion on the proposed lunacy measure was canceled and inquiries were referred by Commissioner Hazen to Corporation Counsel Seal.

The Keystone Automobile Club offered the only opposition to a bill requiring semiannual inspection of motor vehicles. This measure, advocated by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, would rid Washington streets of broken-down and mechanically unsafe autos, it was pointed out. The Keystone organization contended present laws already required inspections and all they needed was enforcement.

Citizens of Georgetown, represented by J. M. Doran, vigorously opposed a bill providing for the extension of Prospect street from Foxhall and Conduit roads through Georgetown to Pennsylvania avenue.

This measure was designed to relieve traffic congestion on M street, Hazen said. Doran said the proposed extension would remove an old Washington landmark — "the oldest Methodist church on the North American continent."

Realty Law Favored.

Charles Rush, of the Washington Real Estate Board, appeared at the hearing to support a measure providing for creation of a real estate commission and license system for real estate brokers and realty salesmen. Twenty-eight States now have such laws, he said, in efforts to protect the public against fraudulent dealings. This bill has the support of local civic and business heads.

L. R. Maddox, representing the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, spoke briefly in support of the proposed subway survey. He agreed with Roberts that it "is the only answer to the mass transportation problem," and urged the movement be studied from both engineering and remedial standpoints.

Lodge, head of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said the group was opposed to any large expenditure for the project. He suggested the Commissioners' engineering staff could handle the survey.

Commissioner Sultan, however, pointed out that his staff was inadequate to tackle the job. Rufus Lusk, local real estate man, urged the Commissioners to "get enough money to do the thing right."

An additional bill, providing for sale of the present District Building, the money to be used for construction of a modern "city hall" on the municipal center site, also was called for discussion. The bill calls for sale of two squares of the municipal center project fronting on Pennsylvania avenue. There was no opposition to the measure and discussion concluded.

Hazen said last night that all bills on the current legislative program, except the Sunday liquor sale measure, would be forwarded to Capitol Hill. In addition to those discussed yesterday, the program includes nearly a score of additional bills.

Child Crippled at Birth Killed Trying to Play 'Like Other Kids'

Stella Carrigan, 11, is dead because she had the will to live and adventure as though she had been a normal child.

She went to her death yesterday on a pair of shiny roller skates, which she was using beyond her own front yard at 102 Carroll street southeast for the first time since she got them as a Christmas gift a year ago.

As she skated the Southeast driveway, near the Capitol grounds, she fell, and because her arms had been twisted and weak since birth, she could not catch herself.

Head Hit Concrete.

She struck her head on the concrete and a few hours after she had been taken to Casualty Hospital, Stella died.

Despite her affliction, which had deprived her of the normal use of her arms throughout her childhood, Stella, in the fifth grade of the Dent School, had learned to write well and to do things around the house.

She had received treatment at Children's Hospital, and had she lived she would have undergone a complicated operation next spring, by which physicians hoped to bring her, in time, to normalcy.

Guarded Carefully.

When first Stella got her skates, her brothers and sisters and her father, James Carrigan, refused to let her venture beyond their sight. This went on a whole year, and it was irksome to see the others go blithely skating away in great figure eights and circles.

"You never let me get out places with the others on my skates," she said yesterday to her foster mother. "Let me go with Nickie. I can skate that fast, too. I want to play like the other kids."

So, with her 8-year-old brother, Nicholas, she went skating away into the warm December air, and then, at the peak of her adventure, she fell.

Nicholas rushed to Capitol Police Sergts. B. R. Craig and John M. McCawley, and told them his sister had fallen and was crying.

At the hospital death was a matter of hours

Two Are Held To Grand Jury In Slayings

Mother of Six Is Accused in Death of Spouse in Quarrel.

A woman and a colored man were held for grand jury action yesterday by a coroner's jury, holding inquest into two holiday murders.

Mrs. Norene Kellison, 35, mother of six children, was held in the fatal shooting of her 25-year-old husband, John Kellison, who died Saturday night in Emergency Hospital of two bullet wounds in his back.

In the second inquest the jury held Lewis Gray, colored, 38, of the 1100 block of Eleventh street northwest, as the killer of John O'Donnell, 30, of 312 Twelfth street northwest.

O'Donnell, a laborer, died instantly of a bullet wound in his heart. Gray is alleged to have confessed the crime, which occurred a few hours before dawn Sunday at Eleventh and M streets northwest. A companion of the victim, John Nolan, 25, of tme 300 block of C street southeast, was wounded in the arm, and a second companion, Frank Mangan, of the Twelfth street address, escaped uninjured.

Four of Mrs. Kellison's children were the principal witnesses who testified yesterday, Roy and Lewis Gregory, 21 and 18 respectively, told the jury they had returned from Baltimore with their stepfather about 3 a. m. Saturday.

They said they met their mother at Eleventh and N streets and that an argument started. They were unable to state what happened after this, they said, because they had gone to their home.

Two of Mrs. Kellison's daughters, Frances, 14, and Bessie, 12, testified they were with their mother when their stepfather returned home. They said there was an argument and that Kellison cursed their mother. Mrs. Kellison, they said, pulled a gun and fired four shots at their stepfather in the yard of their home at 1311 Eleventh street northwest. Their mother then took them to their brother's house, they said.

According to testimony before the jury, O'Donnell, with Nolan and Mangan, were walking at Eleventh and M streets northwest, when they asked Gray for a match.

Gray, Detective Sergt. John W. Wise, of the homicide squad, said, pulled out a gun and shouted:

"Don't ask me for anything."

The detective said his investigation disclosed O'Donnell struck at the colored man, who began to shoot.

Veteran Overpaid; Government Calls For $400 Refund

Talbert, a colored veteran, received formal notice from the Government that, because the clerk who made out Talbert's bonus check made a mistake, Talbert owes Uncle Sam $400.

The veteran turned in his bond and received the check. The body of the check, written out, called for $400; the margin, in numerals, called for $800. He cashed the check for $800 and the error was not discovered until an audit was made in the General Accounting Offices in Washington.

The veteran said he had deposited the entire amount in the bank at the time he cashed the check.

Mgr. Corrigan Ill; Visiting in Rome

Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, is ill in Rome, according to reports received in Washington last night. His condition, it was said, was not alarming.

Mgr. Corrigan, who has been 33 years a priest, was inducted as rector of Catholic University on November 17 last, in the presence of a notable gathering of 5,000, which included Cardinal Hayes, of New York, and Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia.

Judge Assails 'Claw' Games; Ban Awaited

D. C. Court Ruling Only Needs Action of Jury Today.

A formal order barring the operation of "claw" machines anywhere in the District is expected to be signed in District Court today by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, who yesterday in an oral ruling said the contraptions were games of "chance."

Only the absence of the jury prevented the issuance of the edict yesterday. United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, who, with his assistant, John J. Wilson, fought to have the machines barred, said he would await the official recordation of the order today before requesting the Police Department to confiscate anv claw machine found in operation. Once sezied the machines are subject to destruction under District laws.

In his final argument, Wilson estimated their "take" at $1,000,000 a year. They were not so popular as the outlawed pin ball machines, but were played just as fervently by those who sought to try their luck.

An immediate appeal will be taken by the operators of the machines, Defense Attorneys Harry T. Whelan, William D. O'Connell and William A. Gallagher said after the verdict. They intimated an appeal might be taken to the Court of Appeals in an effort to post bond, under which the ruling of Justice Adkins would be held up until a final ruling on the appeal.

In announcing his decision Justice Adkins said:

"A substantial number of players after setting the derrick do not attempt to do anything else while the machine is in operation. When the machine is so played there are chances that the claw may not strike the object aimed at, or if it does strike it, may slip off. There are also chances that even if the claw grasps the article that it may drop it or that the article may be knocked loose by collision with some obstacle before it reaches the chute.

"When the game is so played, I think any reasnable man must reach the conclusion that chance is the prevailing and controlling element and when it is so played, it is being operated according to the directions of the machine itself. For these reasons I feel compelled to grant the Government's motion for a directed verdict."

Fish Peddler Leaves $100,000, Mostly Cash

New York, Dec. 28 (AP).—Police said today that Christopher Hassett, 70, who died on Christmas Eve after living for three years in a $2 a week room, left an estate of $100,000, most of it in cash. Police are seeking his relatives.

Hassett's landlady said he peddled fish two days a week. He never had visitors, she said.

On Tap.

"HERE'S ONE of the Lucius Beebe legends which persists at Yale," Grace Constante attests. "Seems Beebe and a group of Harvard grads descended on Yale on historic Tap Day, when sophs stand around in the college quadrangle and are 'tapped' for the leading fraternities. The student chosen must then rush to his room without speaking to anyone and wait for an emissary from the frat. Well, Beebe and his pals were familiar with all the socially prominent Yale hopefuls, so, about ten minutes before the tapping was scheduled to begin the Harvard contingent went to town and tapped every prospect worth bothering. The sophs, taking it all as legitimate, immediately went to their dorms in silence—and when the real tapping began, only a meager crop remained from which to pick!"

"AS YOU KNOW," writes Irving Caesar, "21 years ago I was on the peace ship, Oscar the 2d, trying to stop the war for Henry Ford. Now Shirley Temple is singng my song, 'Fill our land with peace and bliss, from Maine down to the Isthmus; That's what I want for Christmas.' Some diplomats, remembering the President's recent good-will tour, suggested that I tie this song up with Cordell Hull and the Pan-American Peace Conference. But that means substituting for 'Isthmus' the name 'Tierra del Fuego.' Who can rhyme that?"

"FOR THE PAST few months you've been mentioning the 'Ping-Pong' balls in the Richman-Merrill plane," complains Carl Zeisberg, president of the United States Table Tennis Association. "Table tennis is the name of this sport. Ping-Pong is a proprietary name of a trade-marked brand of table-tennis equipment. Please co-operate, in the interest of accuracy" . . .

DID YOU KNOW," queries Art Arthur from Hollywood, "that Shirley Temple's contract has a clause calling for cancellation of the contract if Shirley 'takes up arms against her country'?" . . . "This happened two weeks ago," S. S. assures. "Immediately after Roosevelt appointed Joe Davies as United States Ambassador to Soviet Russia, Mr. and Mrs. Davies went out to celebrate. The first spot they visited was the Russian Kretchma—which is Manhattan's oldest stronghold for the town's most rabid White Russians!"

"ABOUT A MONTH AGO," Dr. James Stotter contributes, "you interviewed me concerning a medical paper I had written where I said that men were more vain than women. I received much mail, and last week a visit—from an unkempt, unshaven man. Without further ado he approached and pointed his finger at me. 'Are you the man who wrote that men are vainer than women?' He then issued a furious tirade, upbraiding me for my statements and telling me how wrong I was. 'Why, look at me,' he cried. 'I'm not vain, and don't give a damn how I look.' I explained that my theory was entirely general; that it didn't apply to personalities, and finally persuaded him to leave. He was about to go when he drew me to one side and whispered: 'Say, Doc, lend me a buck—to press my suit and for a haircut and shave!'"

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hapless Millionaire.

Hollywood, Dec., 28

Have you wondered what a grown-up former child star thinks about? I have, and I determined to learn the answer. I lunched with Jackie Coogan (17 years ago he was as big a star as Shirley Temple today), and I pried right into his ideas of what life holds for him; what fun he gets from living. Remember, Jackie was a great star, at 22 he is a millionaire, he is good looking girls flock to him. He has big cars, a fine home, goes where he pleases, does what he pleases. You would think he should be supremely happy.

MARY BRIAN.

My guess is that Coogan is not happy. He may even be unhappy. He talks and acts like a frustrated kid. He is bewildered because he would like to work and accomplish, but nobody will believe he is serious. He is treated like a social debutante, when he wants to be bossed and kicked around. At an age when he could not appreciate success, he was successful; now that he is old enough to understand, he is a millionaire failure.

I suppose I was unfair to ask, "are you sorry you were a child star?" because how could he know the answer? He replied that he believed he might be happier today had he not been a child star, but on the contrary he would not be a millionaire.

At one studio yesterday a press agent was trying to persuade Cary Grant to okey several ideas for magazine interviews. At last lanky Cary agreed to talk on the subject. "What I would do if I were Fred MacMurray." Right off, he cracked, "I would have married Lillian Lamont (MacMurray, did you know) but I'd make her dye her hair blonde." What does that make of brown-haired Mary Brian, Grant's special girl-friend?

Amusing, I think, is the fact that John Qualen, who portrays Papa Dionne in the quintuplets pictures, wanted an autographed picture of the real father, and wrote for one. Back came the printed reply: "Please send $1 for an autographed photograph." And Qualen had to pay.

These Three Stars Are Coming Back Again

MYRNA LOY, ASTA AND WILLIAM POWELL, the stars of "The Thin Man," who come back in their original parts in "After the Thin Man," the Dashiell Hammett sequel to his first hit that is to be seen on the screen of a Loew house on New Year's Day. This subject is said by those who have seen it to surpass the first release in the matter of general humor and infectitious fun. That is a pretty stiff order, but maybe so.

Nelson B. Bell — About The Town Showshops

HAVING been the only member of the local critical fraternity to have gone completely overboard for the excellence of Maxwell Anderson's play of "The Wingless Victory" and the superlative quality of Katharine Cornell's performance in it, on the occasion of its recent premiere in the National Theater, it is a source of selfish and probably slightly bigotted gratification to be able to set down significant excerpts from the unanimous indorsement accorded this powerful drama by the New York press, following its Broadway inaugural the night of Wednesday, December 23.

BELL.

Particularly is this true since I was made the object of venomous assault from some quarters for having reported accurately the content of the Anderson tragedy.

Here, then, is what New York had to say about the piece:

Richard Watts, jr., the Herald Tribune: Here at last is a new American play of quality and stature, of eloquence and beauty . . . As for Miss Cornell, it can only be said that she brings splendor to everything she does. Never, not even in "Saint Joan," has she been more heroic, more noble in her spirit and her playing . . . There is an exceptionally fine and powerful performance by Walter Abel, while the other members of the cast are likewise admirable . . . The American theater is alive once more.

Gilbert Gabriel, the American: Of the whole year, probably here is The Event . . . And now, as ever, Miss Cornell is most beautiful to see, most thrilling to hear, most memorable to meet in angry passion, in eloquent death. Confirm her is all we can as the foremost actress of our land . . . Mr. Anderson has done a brilliant job . . . For me his words are almost always music and magic . . . The whole production meets the standards of the play and its chief player which means that it all adds a very golden ark upon the Empire's historic page.

Burns Mantle, the News: The First Actress lends an eloquent presence to Maxwell Anderson's newest tragedy, "The Wingless Victory." An eloquent presence and the most golden of voices we have developed on the native stage since Julia Marlowe's full-throated organ lured tributes from critics . . . The Anderson verse, which none but he can write with the ringing beauty that characterizes it, has never had more feeling expression than she gives it. Walter Abel is tremendously, vitally forceful as the bewildered but stanch Nathaniel.

Richard Lockridge, the Sun: The singing beauty of poetic speech and dignity of feeling which rises, at its best, to nobility are brought to the theater in Maxwell Anderson's "The Wingless Victory" . . . If the season does no better, it will have done well enough and to spare.

John Anderson, the Journal. It is played brilliantly by Miss Cornell . . . There are lines that soar with the stabbing power that Anderson commands when he is at the top of his flight. There are phases of subtle beauty and tenderness and passages of magnificent anger touched with an exact and searing pen . . . Miss Cornell perceives what the play is about and goes straight to it in a performance that appears almost bewitched, so poised does it seem, so finely wrought, so searchingly imagined. She conveys an essential tragedy of race through it, gives it the simple dignity of Oriental awareness, distinguished and gentle, but with subtle power.

Brooks Atkinson, the Times: She is our queen of tragedy, a thoughtful actress and a great one, and she has loosed the furies with a sweep and storm in the center of Mr. Anderson's play . . . Mr. McClintic, with Jo Mielziner at his elbow, has given her a vital production and directed a stimulating performance.

Robert Coleman, the Mirror: Here is emotional dynamite, liquid fire, potent beauty. That Miss Cornell and her supporting cast project it across the footlights with no loss of its power and dignity, its flaming eloquence, its burning sincerity, is a tribute to Mr. McClintic's direction . . . Miss Cornell gives, what in our estimation, is her most brilliant performance. She is lovely to look upon and she overwhelms you with her smouldering, compassionate delivery of Mr. Anderson's verse.

Douglas Gilbert, the World Telegram: It is a sound drubbing for a civilization that still knows not the brotherhood of man . . . Miss Cornell shines with her wonted virtuosity. She is resplendent in her fury against these pious hairshirts, superb in defeat and death.

Kelcey Allen, News-Record: When Miss Cornell made her first entrance in the role of the Malay princess, it was several minutes before the applause permitted her to speak her first line.

Arthur Pollock, the Brooklyn Eagle: Katharine Cornell, eager, eloquent and rich in loveliness is back on the New York stage, returning this time in one of the acid and beautifully worded plays of Maxwell Anderson, "The Wingless Victory."

Rowland Field, the Brooklyn Times Union: The drama in New York took on a new dignity and splendor last evening with the arrival of Maxwell Anderson's play, "The Wingless Victory." And America's greatest actress of her day, Miss Katharine Cornell, increased the importance of the occasion by providing a matchless performance of extraordinary beauty and power in this fine new work by the author of last season's "Winterset" and many other plays of strength and substance . . . The play has been staged with great skill by that unfailing director, Guthrie McClintic.

After all this I am more flattered than ever to have had a few feeble remarks of my own selected for the jacket of the play as published in book form by Anderson House.

"The Garden of Allah" is being screened today at 1:30 p. m. in the Twentieth Century Fox projection room for the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press. Remembering this as I do for the remote period of its stage presentation, with Mary Mannering in the role of the seductress who lured the monk from his worthy works, it seems to me that with Marlene Dietrich in the stellar role and the whole desert business filmed in the new multiple-color Technicolor, this really ought to be something Wednesday morning in this space, perhaps all of the lowdown on it.

Personal nomination, for no particular reason, for the most annoying tune of the year: "The Organ Grinder Swing." Gosh, how I hate that thing! And they play it all the time and it no doubt has sold several million copies, records, or whatnot. That's how good I am at picking them. But I still hate it!

Melodrama of Philanderer Is National Bill

New Play Engages Interest of First-Night Audience at American Premiere.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE TWO MRS. CARROLLS," B. A. Meyer presents a new play in three acts and five scenes by Marguerite Veiller, staged by John Hayden and with settings by G. E. Calthrop. First time on an American stage in the National Theater Monday night.

THE CAST.

Mrs. Harriett Carroll . . . Frances Starr
Hannah . . . Mabel Paige
Geoffrey Carroll . . . Earle Larimore
Mary . . . Betty Hanna
Sarah Carroll . . . Elena Miramova
Mrs. Latham . . . Leonore Harris
Cicely Harden . . . Jeanne Stuart
Guy Pennington . . . Grant Mills
John Harden . . . Whitford Kane

A melodramatic yarn, spun out through three acts and five scenes, in the National Theater last night, despite the tawdriness of much of its content, wound up the evening on the long side of the ledger and received a favorable volume of applause from as large an audience as is to be expected in any playhouse at this season of the year.

"The Two Mrs. Carroll's," I think, begins very badly. It lacks dramatic interest, literary grace and all of the essentials of audience appeal in its first chapter. The second act picks up appreciably by reason of a series of events that point to a problematical climax in the last act. When the last act finally works itself out, there is a pretty tragedy at your feet, architectured largely after the formula of the old ten-twent-thirt dramas that played the Academy of Music back in the days when the Academy of Music was the Academy of Music and not the Strand.

Just a Cad at Heart.

The basic idea of the plot seems to be that an apparently respectable citizen still can be an unconscionable cad. That is what Geoffrey Carroll was. He deserted his first wife to make it possible for him to marry his second and then was on the verge of deserting his second for a third love when his first wife stepped into the picture and broke up his whole nasty project.

Out of that basic situation, Mrs. Marguerite Veiller, wife of Bayard Veiller, author of "Within the Law" and a few other dramatic trifles, has constructed a play that moves consistently and with increasing vigor to its final inevitable conclusion. It is compounding interest as it goes along and affords certain definitely excellent opportunities for members of the capable cast to display of precisely what kind of acting fiber they are made.

The role of pivotal importance is played by Frances Starr, but, by one of those dramaturgic freaks that one encounters now and again, is not the central role of the play. That role is played by Elena Miramova, to whom we shall return presently.

Miss Starr's part is the one that opens the play and closes it, but during long intervals of the three acts she is not on the stage at all. When she is it seems a superfluous thing to say that she executes her tasks with the consummate skill that must characterize the work of one who has brought to the boards such fine things as "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Easiest Way," "The Case of Becky" and all of the other Belasco productions in which she appeared.

Miss Miramova Explodes.

Miss Miramova's part is an emotionally flamboyant one that gives her a chance to express herself a little more volubly and a little more explosively than the other members of the cast. Hers was rather the triumph of the evening, if there was a triumph in the National last evening.

There is another charming member of the feminine ensemble who deserves to be singled out for a fine piece of acting, an exquisite personal beauty and an ability to wear striking gowns beyond anyone who has been along in the living drama this season. She is Jeanne Stuart, who plays the role of Cicely Harden, and Hollywood would do well to cast an eye upon her as leigible screen material.

Earle Larimore, although in a distinctly unsympathetic role in the character of Geoffrey Carroll, I thought last night, turned in the best performance he has brought to the Capital in the past several years—much better than in "Ethan Frome" and infinitely better than in "The Good Earth."

The remainder of the cast contributed in due proportion to the outstanding excellence of a play that is both interesting and thrilling, but in no sense important.

1,800 Watch Gevinson Gain Unanimous Decision Over Temes

District Lad Outpunches Veteran

Loses First Round, but Wears Foe Down Midway in Battle.

Temes Stages Gallant Finish; Arena Filled to Capacity.

By Bill McCormick.

Lou Gevinson, perhaps the best ring prospect ever brought to light here, passed the acid test in his first worth-while professional boxing bout at Turner's Arena last night.

The acid, a very vitriolic dose indeed, was in the form of Joe Temes, an experienced, rugged and courageous featherweight. Lou passed the test by trouncing Temes soundly enough to win a unanimous eight-round decision in the public assay, which was witnessed by a crowd of 1,800. The record assemblage dropped some $2,300 at the box office on its way in.

Spotting Temes almost 250 professional fights, Gevinson, who was making his third start as a paid puncher, was at no time outclassed, albeit he several times dropped behind on points.

Youth Against Age.

From the very outset the contest was a case of youth and almost unbelievable two-fisted punching—as provided by Gevinson—against age, experience and an almost shock-proof chin and chassis—as provided by Temes.

The eventual loser started out well enough, winning the first round by a comfortable margin as he carried the fight to Gevinson, stepped inside his hooks and pounded merrily away at the brisket.

The ultimate result was foretold as early as the second round, however, when Lou found the range with three short lefts which almost knocked Temes' jaw out of shape. Temes outsmarted Lou briefly in the third round, making the former District amateur featherweight champion miss and taking an occasional pot shot.

Ere long, however, the little Jewish southpaw's vicious punches began to wear down Temes. About midway of the bout the Greek seemed destined to kiss the canvas for the full count as Gevinson battered the blood from his puss with venomous lefts and equally damaging rights, tossing in an infrequent wallop to the body by way of variety.

Experience, stamina and courage kept Temes erect during these trying times. He not only lasted the distance, but had enough left for a Garrison finish which won him the last round as Gevinson seemed to tire in his first trip past the six-round limit.

Williams Is Winner.

Sammy Williams, the surprising local colored welterweight, hammered his way to a unanimous six-round decision over Freddie Lewis, in a slow preliminary. Lewis, a substitute for Mark Hough, who was upset by Williams last week, did little or no fighting, which was largely responsible for the poor quality of the fisticuffing.

In another six-round preliminary, Young Palmer, of Camden, N. J., won a unanimous decision from Pete Andropulos, a New York welter.

In a curtain-raiser scheduled for four rounds, Doug Swetnam, Washington, stopped Fenton Blight, a Baltimore feather, in two rounds.

Sammy Meadows, a California heavyweight, scored handily over Young Raspi, of Baltimore, in a six-round semifinal. Raspi was able to land on the classy Coast lad just often enough to keep things interesting, as Meadows won the unanimous decision.

900 Horses Named In Pimlico Futurity

Baltimore, Dec. 28 (AP).—Matt Daiger, secretary and general manager of the Maryland Jockey Club, announced today that 900 nominations from 80 interests have been filed for the 1939 Pimlico Futurity.

Nominations for the annual fall meeting feature for 2-year-olds at the Pimlico race track closed December 15. The 1939 list drew 185 more than named a year ago for the 1938 futurity.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer headed the nominators by naming 90 mares. A. B. Hancock nominated 70, Valdina Farm Stable, 50, and Audley Farm 41.

Ralph Beaver Strassburger, of Route de Lamorlaye, Chantilly (Oise), France, sent in the names of two mares, Celerina and Noor Jahan, bred to Firdaussi.

No Damages for Caddy Hit Plucking Flowers

Philadelphia, Dec. 28 (AP).—A caddy injured by a golf ball while engaged in picking blossoms for a woman golfer is not eligible for workmen's compensation, President Judge Frank Smith ruled today.

The caddy, John J. Boyd, contended his work required him to do anything conducive to the pleasure of a member of the club. He said he had been struck on the head with a ball driven by another woman golfer and suffered a brain concussion.

Reckless Driving Laid To Transylvania Coach

New Orleans, Dec. 28 (AP).—Traffic charges, including reckless driving, were filed by the police here against Claude L. (Little Monk) Simons, jr., football coach of Transylvania College, in connection with an automobile accident yesterday.

Officers said an automobile driven by Simons collided with the rear of the car of Edward William Brown and slightly injured Brown's 3-year-old daughter.

Rose Bowl Sale Sure to Set New Record

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 28.—Pasadena got its first real taste of the approaching Rose Bowl football classic today as the Washington Huskies staged their initial practice on local soil preparing for the struggle with Pittsburgh New Year's Day.

This city, a little hungry for pregame enthusiasm in view of the fact that both Pitt and Washington elected to train elsewhere last week, greeted the boys from the Northwest with wide open arms.

Tournament of Roses officials applied finishing touches to game details, preparing to receive the biggest crowd in Rose Bowl history. With the addition of 3,304 bleacher seats, already bought and paid for, a total of 87,196 fans will witness the twenty-second consecutive game in the bowl.

Huskies Need Work.

As Pitt added another workout to its intensive schedule at nearby San Bernardino, Coach Jimmy Phelan led his Huskies into Brookside Park here for practice.

Rain fell last night, and continued to drizzle today.

"We'll play football whether it rains or not," said Phelan. "Of course we'd like to have some sunshine for the next couple of days, because we need a lot of work.

Coach Jock Sutherland had the same weather worry at San Bernardino, but was apparently undisturbed. His players appeared in great shape after last week's arduous work, and will come into Pasadena Thursday morning, the day before the game, unless plans are shifted.

Phelan mixed up his backfield combinations today, using Jimmy Cain, Merle Miller, Chuck Newton and Jimmy Johnston in one group, and "By" Raines, Elmer Logg, Ed Nowogrowski and Fritz Waskowitz in the other. The latter set may get the starting call, but it's a cinch Cain will see service with running mate, Haines, before the game is many minutes old.

Sutherland apparently is certain of at least one starting nomination in his backfield. That is Marshall Goldberg. Bobby La Rue, the only back ever to make the first string for three years in Sutherland's time at Pitt, will doubtless start now that a leg injury has been cured.

Favorites Lead Girls' Tennis Tournament

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Dec. 28 (U.P.). Encountering little opposition, the two favorites — 15-year-old Helen Bernhard, of New York, and 17-year-old Hope Knowles, of Philadelphia—today advanced to the third round of the Girls' National Indoor Tennis Tournament.

Top-seeded Miss Bernhard toyed with Frances Kelley, of Winchester, 6—0, 6—0 after a 6—0, 6—1 first round victory over Anee Motley, of Boston.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

(News item: Jockey Silvio Coucci draws 15-day suspension for rough riding at Tropical Park.)

"So what?" the casual sports fans will probably ask.

But the folks who have an appreciative eye for a well-judged pace in a hoss race or a fancy bit of hand-riding down the stretch will register a deal of interest in the news that Silvio Coucci has been set down.

POVICH.

Paradoxically, the report that Coucci has run afoul of the track stewards at Miami is quite the most encouraging news concerning the lad in the last 18 months. And that his offense was rough riding is particularly gratifying to Coucci's friends.

Because it signalizes the apparent end of that long, uphill battle of the popular Coucci to come back as one of the Nation's leading riders. The saga of Silvio Coucci is a romantic chapter in turf history—the story of a boy who lost his riding artistry over night and lapsed from his role as the powerful Greentree Stable's No. 1 jockey to a mere journeyman rider who was flinding it increasingly difficult to obtain mounts.

Coucci came out of the Bronx as a pint-sized, olive-skinned, wavy-haired lad four years ago and hung around the stables at the New York tracks until he got a job exercising horses. Within a year he blossomed as the most brilliant apprentice rider of the decade. He was, indeed, the darling of the New York tracks.

The little Italian was a good boy. His salary went home to his mother and the Coucci's moved from their tenement flat to their own home, purchased with the earnings of little Silvio. Nine p. m. found Coucci in bed, 6 a. m. found him galloping horses at the track. His success did not go to his head. Everybody—owners, trainers, fans, yes, and even those supremely jealous kids, the jockeys, liked "The Cooch."

Mrs. Payne Whitney, owner of the elaborate Greentree string of horses, commanded her trainer, Bill Brennan, to hire Coucci for Greentree's exclusive use. Silvio was given a contract, justified Mrs. Whitney's every confidence, won stake after stake astride Greentree mounts and, indeed, was riding on top of the world.

He went to school at Red Bank, N. J., where Mrs. Whitney provided a classroom and teacher for the jockeys, exercise and young stable hands of the Greentree string. He went to Chicago when the Greentree horses raced at Arlington and when the kidnaping hysteria was at its height two years ago in the Midwest, Mrs. Whitney assigned to Coucci a special personal bodyguard. She liked "The Cooch."

Coucci's presence on a horse slaughtered its odds. The little Italian was fearless in the jams, a master judge of pace, owner of a remarkable pair of hands and had an excellent seat. Many were the days he rode four winners on a single program.

That was the story of Silvio Coucci until Duke Belizzi was killed. Belizzi was another Italian boy out of the Bronx, who had preceded "The Cooch" to the race tracks. Belizzi went down in a jam at Acqueduct. Death and Silvio Coucci also rode in that race.

That race and the death of his pal left its mark on "The Cooch." His star descended from that day. Silvio Coucci became a timid rider, over-cautious, and his winning mounts dwindled rapidly. Disgusted Greentree Stable officials terminated his contract. The riding ace of the year before was a free agent.

Last summer, Coucci's agent was virtually begging for mounts. His reputation earned him many, but trainers became increasingly unwilling to trust their horses to the lad. There were too many bold, fearless riders to be had.

And then, two weeks ago, in Florida, Coucci's star began to rise. Horses were wining for Coucci again. His friends dared to hope that the lad had regained his nerve. But there was always the fear that he was simply getting the best mounts. And then—yesterday—the notice that "The Cooch" had been suspended for "rough riding." Draw your own conclusions.

Dogs, Skaters Newest Foes For Owens

By the United Press.

Havana, Dec. 28.—Ice skaters and greyhounds will serve as competition for Jesse Owens during a forthcoming tour of Atlantic States, Marty Forkins, his New York manager, announced tonight.

Owens, Cleveland, Ohio, Negro, who won three individual Olympic championships at Berlin, opened his professional foot-racing career here by beating a horse in a handicap race. The colored star believes he can conquer most members of the animal kingdom in short races.

Arrangements for the mixed competitions will be made in New York next week, Forkins said.

Forkins protested the refusal of Daniel Ferris, executive secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union in New York, to approve an exhibition race between Owens and Conrad Rodriguez, Cuban and Central American sprint champion.

"This is incomprehensible to me," Forkins said. "Ferris told me he had the highest regard for Owens and wouldn't put in his way any obstacles toward making money.

"Now he's going too far. He's persecuted Owens ever since the Berlin Olympics. We will demand that Ferris change his attitude or else we will institute legal action against the A. A. U. We are aware that Owens cannot compete freely with amateurs but he shouldn't be deprived of any privileges any white star who was a former amateur enjoys and there is no reason why Jesse shouldn't compete on the same program with amateurs."

Owens today definitely agreed to give a broad-jump exhibition between halves of the Auburn-Villanova football game on New Year's Day.

Forkins said he was ready to "wager any amount" that Owens would defeat the fastest race horse in America from an even start, provided the distance be 100 yards and the race held on a track of ten laps per mile.

New York, Dec. 28.—(U.P.)—Daniel J. Ferris, executive secretary of the A. A. U., admitted tonight that he had refused to approve of a match race between Owens and an amateur.

"There was nothing else to do," he said. "In the first place, Owens was under suspension. Now he is definitely a professional and out of our jurisdiction. It is untrue to say that I am persecuting Owens."

Hoyas, Stanford Drill For New York Cagers

New York, Dec. 28.—Georgetown University and Stanford met today on the basketball court—but it was only a scrimmage.

The Hilltoppers, preparing for their important game with New York University Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden, worked out for nearly an hour with the West Coast cagers, who will meet Long Island University in the other half of the Garden collegiate double-header.

Grid Leaders Ask More Honesty

'Less Hypocrisy' Urged in Subsidizing and Recruiting Men.

Present System Makes Liars and Cheaters, Avers Nichols.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 28.—Fortified by the best budget-balancing football season they have enjoyed since pre-depression days, college educators and athletic leaders from all parts of the United States struck several sturdy blows today in behalf of "more honesty and less hypocrisy" in handling the troublesome subject of athletic recruiting and subsidizing.

For the first time in years, the gathering of the country's best collegiate minds for the midwinter conclave — revolving principally around annual sessions of the National Collegiate Athletic Association—dealt with football's amateur-professional problems as frankly in open meetings as they did in the hotel lobbies.

Discard Distinctions.

Dr. William L. Hughes, associate professor of physical education in Teachers College, Columbia University, declared that sports writers are not alone in considering that present trends in football subsidizing "reek with dishonesty and hypocrisy." He urged that outworn distinctions between the amateur and professional athlete be discarded, accepting the former as the novice and the latter as the skilled performer, and asked:

"In short, what is the difference between payment and nonpayment of a college athlete so long as he conducts himself like a gentleman and keeps his scholastic work up to the proper standard? Why should we deny him the chance to earn enough to make his college education possible?"

Equally emphatic and covering wider territory was Dr. J. H. Nichols, director of athletics at Oberlin College, in discussing football problems primarily from the viewpoint of the smaller liberal arts college.

Sharp Rejoinder.

Dr. Nichols not only proposed a nine-point program for the smaller institutions, featuring abolition of gate receipts as well as elimination of all leagues or conferences, but drew a sharp rejoinder from the veteran Fielding H. Yost, Michigan's director of athletics, by stating that his opinion that the present system of (commercialized college sport) makes liars, cheaters and compromise experts out of many players and administrators."

"Do you mean to say I've been associating with liars and cheaters all my life?" demanded Yost. "If so, I disagree thoroughly with what you have to say."

Dr. Nichols quickly explained that he had qualified his statements, that he intended no blanket indictment, nor any implication that questionable methods necessarily were allied with athletic success, in large institutions.

Giant Nebraskans Play G.W. Saturday

Cornhuskers Can Use Five Averaging 6 Ft. 4 Ins.

When Nebraska tangles with George Washington at Tech High School, Saturday night, it will mark the first time a Big Six basketball team has played in Washington since Kansas met the Colonials here some four years ago.

The Nebraska game also will be the first major game of the season and the first game of the New Year. The contest with Nebraska will be the second half of a double-header, with the unbeaten George Washington freshmen scheduled to open the show against the Tech High team.

The Cornhuskers will bring 17 men on their squad. The shortest, Bill Kovanda, is 5 feet 10½ inches. The biggest, Lawrence Nelson, 6 feet 6¾ inches. Twelve members of the Nebraska squad are 6 feet 1, or taller and the visitors can put a complete team on the floor which will average better than 6 feet 4 inches.

Regal Grid Champs Honored at Banquet

Ben Kail served as master of ceremonies. Speeches also were made by Jan Jankowski, coach of the undefeated eleven; Otto Nielson, director of the Northeast Boys Club, which supplied the players, and Regal.

Bred to Run

By Walter Haight.

SYNOPSIS.

A colt is foaled on the Ridgeway Farm. He is given much advice by his mother as he learns to munch grass and test his wobbly legs. The Ridgeways are forced to dispose of their horses at auction and the colt is "thrown in for good measure" when his mother, Battleship Girl, is sold to the Witmore Farm. Dorothy Holbrook's auto has a flat tire near the fence and she sees the colt frolicking. Later she persuades her father to buy him, identifying the colt by a white ring around his leg. Taken to Holbrook Manor, the colt grows like a weed. He and "Miss Dorothy," as he calls his owner, become fast friends. The colt meets Trainer Jensen and is given early racing education.

CHAPTER FIVE.

To the Races.

The barrier went up on my racing career at Bowie in the spring.

The meeting had been under way a few days and I had been put through the paces that go with sending a young horse to the post for the first time. I had spent several mornings at the starting gate. With several other colts and fillies, I broke out of the stalls at the sound of the bell. We ran perhap a furlong and then came back to try it again. While many of the young horses and some of the older ones, scheduled to make their first starts, had to be fairly dragged into the stalls, I walked in and stood as I awaited the getaway signal. Joe, one of the stable boys, would keep a strong grip on me until the bell and then would throw his arms out. We had no trouble, thanks to the fact that I had been thoroughly schooled at Holbrook Manor.

Next I was given "paddock education." This consisted of being led to the paddock during racing hours. This was to accustom me to the paddock under conditions that would exist on the days when I was to race. If you're interested, horses that are being thus educated do not wear numbers on their bridles when led around the paddock.

The following afternoon I was ridden on the track between races for further schooling. The idea was to get me used to seeing and hearing the crowd. Joe guided me into the middle of the stretch and turned me to face the stands. He kept me standing there for perhaps a minute. When I did not shy, he seemed satisfied that the crowd would not frighten me. He gave me a short gallop before we returned to the barn.

One day Trainer Jensen came along the stable row and told Foreman Donovan to work me three-eighths the next day.

"There's a race in the book for this one Friday and I want to see what he can do," said Jensen.

Donovan nodded and when the first workout group went out on the track just after dawn, I was with them. Joe was in my saddle. The workout hardly differed from the others. I was used to the bridle now and the saddle strap that seemed too tight the first time I had worn one, now fit comfortably over my ribs. The bandages on my front legs did not frighten me as they did when first applied.

I galloped once around the track. Trainer Jensen was watching by the fence at the judges' stand. Joe and I were at the far turn when Joe relaxed the grip on the reins and drew in his heels on my ribs. It was the signal for me to run and I did run. I was well into the stretch before I felt a slight pressure from Joe's grip and then he pulled so hard that I thought my teeth would snap.

Joe had always treated me kindly. I did not understand his action until later at the stables. Joe was sponging me off when Trainer Jensen walked up.

"How did the black go?" he asked, fingering a stopwatch.

"Like to run out from under me, boss," Joe replied. "I saw you wave your arm when I came into the stretch. We must have been showing that Racing Sheet clocker too much, eh boss?"

Jensen did not answer. However, while Joe went to the tack room Jensen turned to a short, fat, fancy-dressed fellow, smoking an oversized cigar. "This is the one I told you about. This may be the one we will use. I haven't definitely decided but he looks good," said Jensen.

The cigar man nodded, shook the change in his pocket and then whispered in Jensen's ear because Joe had returned.

I was happy. I could run fast. I would show them Friday that I could earn my way. So I was the one they "might use." I didn't quite understand that but it seemed to mean that I must be better than the other colts in the barn.

I tried not to think of my first race. I didn't want to be nervous but for some reason or another I didn't sleep well Thursday night. Joe and some of the other stable hands had a crap game in the empty stall across the way and I could almost follow every roll of the dice. This was almost a nightly occurrence and usually did not bother me.

Friday was a big day in my life. I learned my name and renewed my acquaintance with Miss Dorothy.

Shortly after noon she came with several other girls. They were from her school, she told Trainer Jensen, visiting with her over the Easter holidays.

I recognized her voice before I saw her.

She ran to my stall.

"Here he is girls," she shouted, patting me on the head, "how are you doing, Flat Tire, old boy."

Flat Tire?

So that was the name she had picked for me. I was keenly disappointed. A colt by Port Hole out of Battleship Girl and named Flat Tire. I had expected Gun Blast, Brass Railing or War something. But I was soon to learn the reason.

"Did I ever tell you how I picked this colt's name?" asked Miss Dorothy. Without waiting for an answer (I was glad she didn't) she said, "If father's car had not had a flat tire, I never would have had this colt."

She told the story that was familiar to me. About watching me run in the field while the tire was being changed.

"Flat Tire," I said it over and over to myself. I didn't run with a name. I would use these four good hooves.

The girls agreed that it was an appropriate name. And when they all gathered around me, rubbing my neck and wishing me luck I became used to Flat Tire. Anyway it was better than being called "That Black" or "The Black" or "You Bum." The last named being Foreman Donovan's pet monicker for me on the farm. Just why those who are in daily contact with race horses seldom call them by their right names, I have never learned.

Joe led me to the paddock. And I was nervous. A man placed a

Football Betting, Pro Tactics Condemned by Brotherhood

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 28.—College football went to its annual clinic today, the eleventh annual sportsmanship brotherhood.

Ramifications, such as professionalism, betting and conduct of spectators came in for their usual criticism, but the gridiron sport likewise was pictured as having a definite part in every educational program.

Dr. Robert C. Clothier, president of Rutgers University, traced the growth of football since its inception in 1869, when teams of 25 players each from Princeton and Rutgers met at New Brunswick, N. J.

"A great deal of water has gone over the dam since 1869," he said. "Organization in a degree undreamed of in those days has come into American athletics. * * * There has grown a degree of public and alumni interest in our intercollegiate football games which, while admirable in many respects, is not always rational and which often places an unwholesome emphasis on victory.

"This has influenced colleges and universities sometimes to adopt unwise methods of attracting good athletes, and in order to win, to impose a terrific load upon its player."

The relationship between victory and the budget and the importance of financial income also were cited because "the continuance of minor sports and intramural athletics depends largely upon football receipts." The danger in betting, he said, lies in the fact that "if through the activity of unscrupu[illegible] persons, some day a major football game should be thrown because financial temptation too great had been offered to young men still in their immature years, the blow to American amateur sport would be irreparable."

Football's future depends upon its value as part of the educational program, said Carl Snavely, head coach of Cornell University. Advancing civilization has created an "infinitely more urgent need for something which in the eyes of youth of all age, sex and description, will place a premium upon such qualities as courage, determination, loyalty, perseverance and unselfishness.

"If these values can be taught on the field of play rather than on the field of war, what difference does it make if the boy gets a few bruises and sprains," said Snavely. "The greatest need in the field of education today is something that will place a correct evaluation upon the quality of sportsmanship and all that it means in the terms of character and chivlry."

'Battling Arthur' Brisbane, as Youth, Scooped on Result Of Sullivan-Mitchell Bout by Reporter He Rescued in Riot

Bill McCormick,
Post Sports Department:

Dear Bill—We were beginning to think you modern sports writers were pretty hot stuff until a great newspaper editor died in New York last week and we learned how boxing was "covered" in the good old days when men were brave and bold.

The editor's name was Arthur Brisbane, you know—the man who threw Charley Mitchell down a flight of steps. Yes sir, the same Charley Mitchell that held the immortal John L. Sullivan to a draw.

Our curiosity was aroused so we checked back on the Brisbane-Mitchell battle. And we read how he covered sports.

You modern sports writers can take a back seat from now on. You are just a bunch of cookie pushers compared to the men who covered Boxing in the Good Old Days.

Brisbane was 24 years old and a reporter for the old New York Sun when John L. Sullivan was the biggest news story of the day. When Sullivan went to London in 1888 the Sun assigned Brisbane to "cover" him.

Stephen Bonsal, of 3142 P street northwest, two years Brisbane's junior, was the London correspondent for the New York Herald that year. Two years ago, in Scribner's Magazine, Bonzal wrote an article describing how he and Brisbane covered the Sullivan-Mitchell battle. It's a story that would make a modern boxing correspondent's hair curl.

Sullivan and Brisbane had been in London only a few weeks when Bonsal, who was pinch hitting as a sports writer, learned he had real opposition. The revelation came in a cable from his home office which said:

"Brisbane and the Sun are making a great hit with a daily special column devoted to the champion. Our readers are hungry for every bit of news about the champion. Go to it."

Bonsal "went to it" with such vigor that one night at a sparring match in St. James Hall Charley Mitchell took issue with him. In Scribner's Bonsal wrote:

"Charley Mitchell came up to me and expressed his frank opinion of my honored editor and of myself in unmeasured and unseemly terms, and I condescended to reply in kind. Then Mitchell struck me and possibly emboldened by the fact that he was at least half seas over and by no means up to his normal fighting form, I struck back. Brisbane loyally intervened as "the mugs and the plugs" who were with Mitchell surrounded me. Soon a small-sized riot was in progress. Police and pugs all pitched in with the strange purpose of pitching us out. Brisbane, gallant fellow, standing right by me and hitting out right and left, was a tower of strength."

Boxing promoters were the same generous fellows then, that they are today, Bosnal revealed, Bill, when he wrote:

"I thought I had still another friend in the hostile crowd, and this one I had hitherto clearly misjudged. Above the tumult and the uproar I heard Pony Moore, father-in-law and principal backer of Mitchell shouting, "Don't 'it 'im Charley. Don't 'it 'im.' And then a word of explanation—'You might sprain your thumb again.'

Bonsal concluded:

"The upshot of the matter was that Brisbane and I were thrown out of the hall, none too gently."

At his home last night Bonsal said he was too deeply affected by the death of his old friend to talk about the Lincoln incident, but he did say:

"Mr. Brisbane was a man of tremendous strength. Had it not been for him I would have been terribly beaten."

You know the story, Bill, of how Brisbane is supposed to have grabbed the terrible Charley Mitchell and tossed him over his shoulders in the middle of the riot.

Bonsal in his Scribner's article related how Brisbane was "scooped" on two of the biggest stories of Sullivan's foreign invasion. Bonsal describes how one of the "scoops" was a mere matter of luck. He wrote:

"Perhaps with the passing of the

Ritzenberg, Cowan Reach Third Round In U. S. Boys' Tennis

Former Hard Pressed to Triumph

Johnsen Is Eliminated as Kenyon College Pair Sparkle.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 28.—Two of the three Washington entrants in the National Indoor Junior and Boys Tennis Championships survived second round matches at the huge Seventh Regiment Armory here today.

While Albert Ritzenberg, Capital youth seeded No. 7 in the twenty-second junior event, was outlasting Robert Keefe, Brooklyn, N. Y., 8-6, 5-7, 7-5, his doubles partner, Davie Johnsen was succumbing to Marvin Kantrowitz, No. 4 seeded player, 6-2, 6-2.

Maurice Cowan, the other Washington boy, went into the third round of the boys event with a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Herman Blumberg, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Keefe gave the favored, smooth-stroking Ritzenberg a terrific battle before the seeded youth finally came through to win after being a few points from defeat several times. It was the hardest fought match of the tournament to date, with Ritzenberg's steadiness in the final set determining the eventual result.

Two players from Kenyon College in Gambier, Ohio, justified their rankings as the No. 1 and No. 2 players in the junior championships.

After Morey Lewis, whose home is in Texarkana, Tex., and seeded No. 2, had defeated Orme Wilson, jr., of New York, 6-1, 6-1, Don McNeill, his teammate from Oklahoma City, came through with an even easier triumph over Alfred I. Jaffe of New York, winning 6-0, 6-0.

Robert A. Low, of New York, ranked tenth, and Peter Lauck of Montclair, N. J., turned in one of the most exciting matches of the day. Lauck won the first set 6-4, but Low squared matters by taking the second 11-9. After the New Jersey boy had taken a 3-2 lead in the final set, Low steadied and went on to win 6-4.

Harper H. Ink, jr., of San Diego, Calif., seeded No. 1 in the boys' event, easily reached the third round, defeating Donald Fairbrain of Scarsdale, N. Y., 6-1, 6-0.

Three other seeded players also won their second round contests, John L. Jorgensen, Chicago, No. 6, eliminated William Witkin, New York, 6-2, 6-4; Joseph Greenberg, No. 4, from New York, defeated Ted Schein, also of New York City, 6-1, 6-1, and Richard J. Bender, No. 5, from Elizabeth, N. J., moved up by disposing of William J. Walker, Woodcliff, N. J., 6-1, 6-0.

Vet Calls Modern Fight Writers Soft

weeks my cables began to pall upon our readers, or at least upon my editor. Certainly I could not keep up with Brisbane in his ever fresh and almost inspired accounts of Sullivan's bulging muscles, of how he knocked out poor Toff Wall at the Pelican Club with one hand behind his back, or how John L. looked in the evening, when he broke training and sat in the royal box at the Criterion with a tilted "seegar" in his mouth. * * *

Change of Air.

"Desiring, perhaps, to expose me to a competition from which I must increasingly suffer, the paper sent me off to Stockholm, and while I was convinced in advance that my secret mission there would prove a wild goose chase, I rejoiced at the change of air and the very different surroundings."

Is there any truth, Bill, in the reports we hear in the city room that you are going to be sent to Madrid to cover the war

On the day Bonsal returned to London he learned from a friend that John L. and Albert Edward, the Prince of Wales, had met at a Guards' luncheon. Brisbane had been there, but as he was leaving an English lord stopped John L. and asked that nothing about the meeting with the prince be allowed to appear in the newspapers.

Bonsal wrote:

"Of course not," answered John. "We met as gentlemen and there will not come a peep from me or from Brisbane either." And Brisbane, noble fellow, assented, though he afterward admitted that a cold chill came over his heart. He had fondly hoped this would be his greatest story, and in all probability it would have been but for the pledge binding him, that John, the big fellow, had given without thought of the irreparable damage he was inflicting on the chronicles of our day and generation."

Needed a Horse.

Bonsal cabled 5,000 words on the story.

At the historic battle between Sullivan and Mitchell, Brisbane was "scooped" for want of a horse, Bill. He rode to the scene of the fight in a cab. Bonsal went on horseback. Police rounded up all the cabs and their occupants while Bonsal galloped through their lines to cable a description of the fight which lasted 3 hours and 11 minutes and ended in a draw.

What sports writers ride horseback to the fights today, Bill?

Brisbane became a famous editor and Bonsal a noted correspondent, but in recent years their greatest joy was to chat about the days when they were sports reporters together.

But they were great newspapermen. I wonder what we'll talk about when we are in our seventies. What we read about Wally Simpson, I guess, or maybe that long count in Chicago.

Yours truly,

Brown Bowl Game Set on January 1

Already dubbed the "Brown Bowl game" in honor of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, Washington's first New Year's Day football attraction is rapidly drumming up keen interest. The city's unlimited, amateur championship will be hanging in the balance when the Police Boys Club collides with the Congress Heights eleven the afternoon of January 1, 1937.

Catholic University Stadium is the probable site of the conflict, with Fairlawn Field as the alternative scene of action. In their only other meeting this year the teams played to a 0-0 tie. Congress Heights is unscored upon and won the amateur title last year.

Director Morris Fox of the Boys Club believes an amateur championship game may become an annual attraction for the Capital, and a trophy will probably be awarded the winner, commemorating its victory in the "Brown Bowl game."

Both teams will present a lineup liberally sprinkled with high school stars. In fact, the Congress Heights forces look very much like the Eastern High A. C., with nine Eastern stars of the past and present in the starting line-up.

Beat Winchester.

The Heightsmen opened defense of their city championship with a 6-0 victory over the Winchester (Va.) A. C., and then handed a similar defeat to the Anacostia Eagles. The Takoma Fire Department was the next victim, 25-0, and the Eckington A. C. bowed next, 38 to 0. In their last time out, the Congress boys swamped Hyattsville, 23-0, to run their point total for the year up to 84 against none for the opposition.

The Eastern stars playing for Heightsmen include Earl Fox, All-High selection in '35, at left end; John Donovan, at left tackle; Billy Cattell, at left guard, and Bill Kemp, All-High center this year, at the pivot post. Joe Mathieson, at right tackle, is another Eastern product, while the team is quarterbacked by Al Kidwell, Eastern's field general on The Post's All-High team.

Jack Sugrue, an All-High selection in 1935, and Russ ("Speedy") Kendricks, two other stars, make the backfield three-quarters for Eastern.

The Police team, which has swept through one opponent after another, for a highly successful season, has Gene Davis, ace punter and ball carrier at Eastern this year, in the backfield, and Sam Fox, Central's fine pass catcher and second-team All-High selection, at end.

Rideout Seen New U. S. Track 'Great'

New York, Dec. 28 (AP).—The attention of national athletic leaders here was attracted today to the sensational distance running of Wayne Rideout, Texas Teachers, who conquered the redoubtable Don Lash, of Indiana, in the Sugar Bowl track meet at New Orleans.

It was pointed out that Rideout's time of 9:03.5 for 2 miles represented the second fastest mark ever made by an American, indoors or out. Lash's 8:58.3 at Princeton last June, a world as well as American record, is the only superior mark on the books, so far as United States competitors are concerned.

Rideout and his twin brother, Blaine, likely will be invited to show their speed on Eastern boards this winter, as a result of their latest performances. The present American indoor 2-mile record, 9:07.4, is held by Ray Sears, former Butler (Ind.) runner.

Celtics in 3 Tilts This Week-End In D. C., Va.

The Original New York Celtics, still basking in the basketball glory that was theirs a decade or so ago, will engage the Heurich Brewers, conquerors of the Renaissance, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon at the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest.

Defeating the world famous Rennies, Sunday, 42-34, was no small feat, and the inspired Brewers hope to take at least one game from the Celtics.

Saturday's game will start at 8:30 and Sunday's, 3:30. Preliminaries will precede each contest.

D. & H. Quintet Conquers G. P. O.

Beach Stars as Police Cage Tourney Opens; WPA Will Play.

Delaware & Hudson got off to a flying start in the unlimited class of the Police Boys Club city-wide basketball tournament last night at George Washington gymnasium, by defeating G. P. O. in a thriller, 22 to 18. George Beach paced the winners with 10 points.

D. C. Paper Co. eliminated Georgetown Boys Club, 22 to 16, in the 145-pound class, and in the 130-pound class, in which The Post is donating a trophy, Washington Boys Club beat Police No. 5, 37 to 12, and American Paint Store put out Georgetown Boys Club, 18 to 12.

Heurich Crashers eliminated Langley Boys' Club, 13-12, in the 115-pound class and in the 100-pound class, Y. M. C. A. won from Police Boys' Club No. 4, 33-8, and Leland eliminated Northeast Cardinals, 19-15, after two extra periods.

One of the most unusual games in local basketball history came about in the 85-pound class when the Washington Boys' Club Blues whitewashed the Northeast Eagles, 26—0. Shut-out games in basketball are as rare as hen's teeth, but the little boys in Blue had such an air-tight defense that the Eagles simply couldn't get through.

Keene, of Leland, made the goal that tied the score at 13-all, forcing the extra period in the contest with Northeast Cardinals. He starred in the two extra periods.

Today and tonight there will be more action in the Police tournament being run off by Morris Fox, assistant director.

Schedule for tonight and results:

85-pound class—10 a. m., Y. M. C. A. Ravens vs. Police B. C. No. 4; 11 a. m., Georgetown B. C. vs. Police B. C. No. 5.

100-pound class—12 noon, B. C. W. Red Birds vs. Merrick B. C.; 1 p. m., Northeast B. C. vs. Georgetown B. C.

115-pound class—2 p. m., Northeast B. C. vs. Police B. C. No. 4; 3 p. m., Y. M. C. A. Eagles vs. Epiphany Chapel; 4 p. m., B. C. W. Americans vs. Police B. C. No. 5.

130-pound class—6 p. m., St. John's Flashes vs. Leland A. C.; 7 p. m., Police B. C. No. 4 vs. Northeast B. C.

145-pound class—8 p. m., Heurich Senate vs. Bevello Plumbers.

Mader Fights Roper At Arena, Monday

Heavyweights will occupy the spotlight at Turner's Arena next Monday night when Eddie Mader, of New York, and Jack Roper, who made his mark on the Coast, have it out in a scheduled 10-rounder.

Mader is a local favorite here. He has shown to advantage in defeating Billy Nichy and others. Roper is a young brother of Capt. Bob Roper, one-time famous heavyweight who campaigned with great success during and after the war.

Tennis Attracts Sugar Bowl Visitors

Bitsy Grant and Frankie Parker Win; Boxing, Basketball Listed.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Dec. 28.—Holiday visitors gathering for the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl football game between Louisiana State University and Santa Clara witnessed some spectacular tennis in the opening round of the midwinter festival tournament today.

The preliminary events leading up to the gridiron clash between Louisiana State's undefeated Tigers and Southeastern Conference champions and Santa Clara's once-beaten Bronchos, end Thursday with the tennis finals.

Seeded stars including Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, favorite to unseat the defending champion—young Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla.—were forced to rally to gain the second round of the tennis tourney.

Grant, third ranking performer in the Nation and seeded No. 1 had to open up with all his fancy strokes to eliminate Joe Abrams, of New York, Tulane University freshman, 8—6, 6—3.

Hendrix, who won the Inaugural tournament last winter by upseting Wilmer Allison, defeated Ed Sutter, of New Orleans, 1—6, 6—4, 6—3. Hendrix is seeded No. 4.

St. Peter's Pinmen In Sweeps Tonight

Holy Name pinmen will roll in the third annual St. Peters Sweepstakes, tonight at 8 p. m. at the Northeast Temple drives, with 14 teams in the St. Peters group shooting for prizes in team, doubles and singles events. The games will be run on a handicap basis with entries receiving the full difference between their handicap and scratch.

Prizes will be awarded to the two winning teams, the first high doubles score, high individual average for the six games rolled and the all-events winner.

El Edlovitch, Georgetown youngster, went to the front in the Junior championship tournament, sponsored by the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, last night at the Arcadia alleys, taking the lead in the first block with a three-game set of 371. D. Singer and J. Berman, Convention Hall bowlers, gained second and third places with 366 and 326, respectively.

The second and final block will be rolled tonight.

Checked Up on the New Basketball Rules? Nat Holman's Views Need Special Rule Book

By John R. Vosburgh.

Ever since basketball struggled out of its peach-basket infancy in 1891, it has been a bigger worry to the rule-makers than Edward VIII to the Archbishop of Canterbury. And now a surprising difference of opinion between the famous Nat Holman and Oswald Tower, editor of the official rulebook, has added further fuel to the fire.

It has required a special edition of the rulebook for Holman, one of the game's immortals, to refute Editor Tower's views on "blocking, or "the pickoff" bugaboo of the rule-makers for ten years. A few of the "special" editions are available in Washington—mailed out to referees in this section.

This was originally to have been a story on the new basketball rules this year and on the marked increase of the five-man defense as a weapon against ever improving offensive tactics.

It seems Editor Tower believes a player is entitled to any position on the court "providing physical contact with an opponent does not result." Holman, a member of and the national rule-making board, coach at C. C. N. Y. and probably the greatest player the game has ever seen, in two pages (30A and 30B) in the special edition, holds that where it is reasonably certain "the intent of the player" is to impede the progress of an offensive player" a foul has been committed, whether or not actual physical contact occurred.

Holman's insertion in the rulebook is considered a sudden outgrowth of the views of the Eastern Intercollegiate Association, where his view on the rule is enforced. The former Original Celtics believes basketball should be a game of science, fast-breaking and speed not one of body-checking.

Orrel Mitchell, local official, and only Washington member of the national board, believes the difference of opinion, merely emphasizes the need of a uniform rule on blocking. Mitchell says "Men from the Coast think blocking should be called for one thing; men from the Middle West another, the South another and the East another. Teams playing in distant sections are particularly up against it."

The blocking Holman and Tower speak of is generally called the "pick-off play," often consisting of a stationary pass from a boy to his teammate, the passer then stepping between his teammate and the latter's guard.

The outstanding rule changes you will note this year follow:

(1) If a player hits the hand, below the wrist, of a player shooting a basket, it is not a foul, the hand being considered a part of the ball. (This is obviously a move to strengthen the defense.)

(2) A substitute may communicate immediately with his teammates. (This is possibly a move of the coaches to widen their authority, but also does away with coaching from the bench, smuggling signals, etc. Will probably mean sudden rushes of subs in last few minutes of play.)

(3) There will be four time-outs instead of three. (Fast nature of game demanded it.)

(4) To prevent roughing on the center tap, a 6-foot zone around the center circle will restrain players from crowding on the jump. (Officials, often roughed at the center tap, were very much in favor of this rule, incidentally.)

(5) Face-guarding rule has been tightened. Last year, some contact was necessary for a face-guarder to foul; now there need to be no contact to constitute a foul. (Will mean, of course, more fouls called than last year for face-guarding.)

(6) Scorers must be sure of line-up two minutes before the game.

(7) Captains must be notified by referees of three minutes left of halftime intermission, not by scorer as formerly.)

Official Mitchell points that the sudden rise to prominence of the five-man, zone or "set" defense, comes from last year's rule outlawing the pivot play in the foul-shot lane, which rendered the zone defense decidedly anemic.

Basketball being so tense and fast a game you'll probably notice little or no change in your entertainment this year, but you can't say we didn't tell you.

Blind Pig Takes Tropical Purse

Gelding Wins In Florida Debut

Conservative Is Second by a Half-Length; Suspend Coucci.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 28 (AP).—The remarkable good fortune of Mrs. Emil Denemark with her powerful string of horses here continued merrily on this afternoon. The Chicago sportswoman was represented in the Ibis purse, a five and a half furlong feature for all ages, by the brown 3-year-old Blind Pig and the gelding added another success to his popular owner's list. Charles Kurtsinger guided the $11.80 for two shot first home by two lengths in the fast time of 1:05 2-5.

Conservative, representing W. W. Adams, earned the place by a half length, while Lemar Stock Farm's Must Be was third in the field of six. "Big Bert" Michell had Blind Pig in great condition for his local premiere. The son of Bull Dog had not started since last August at Washington Park.

Joyride was favorite for the Ibis. The colt was last away and lacked enough early foot to be a threat. He made up some ground and was barely edged out of the show.

Rainland, an outsider, raced along head and head with Blind Pig into the short home lane, then stopped as Blind Pig carried the canary and blue banner into the clear. Conservative, after breaking in front, was kept well up and outfinished Must Be.

Lucky Jean, owned and bred by William V. Dwyer, managing director of the Gables track, raced to her second straight victory in the first race on today's program. Well handled by Joe Renick, the 2-year-old filly got up to beat the pace-making Alice Highland by a half length. Touche was third, a length farther away. Lucky Jean, instead of showing the way as expected, maintained a position close off the pace and ran over Alice Highland in the closing strides to return form players $5.80 for $2.

Lotofus, speedy but stopping 3-year-old daughter of John P. Grier, ran one of her good races when she stuck it out for the full six furlongs to capture the purse in the second. Apprentice Schraudenbach gave the lightly-weighted filly a [illegible]. The boy let his mount [illegible] clear lead and held her [illegible] admirable fashion to [illegible] by [illegible] lengths at $9.70 for $2. Emvee [illegible] a fast closing second, [illegible] lengths before Blue Donna.

Coucci Suspended.

Jockey [illegible] Coucci, who has been showing good form in his attempted comeback here lately, struck a snag when he drew a ten-day suspension from the stewards for [illegible] riding in the second race. The stewards took action on the report of a patrol judge. The Bronx boy was astride Monks Gold, which dropped out of it after racing well up in the first quarter mile.

The talent collected in the third, which went to Amqui, a $5.80 for $2 shot. Irving Anderson, leading local rider, made no mistakes with the filly, hustling her along from the break. Brother Newt offered strong contention and Amqui could not get clear until the final drive, when the favorite drove away to score by a length and a half. Brother Newt managed to hold on to the place by a half length over Again.

Thanks largely to the fact that the heavily played Rafter and the second choice, Four Eleven, hooked up in a suicidal duel, Hirsch Jacobs was able to hang up his 177th success of the year with the juvenile filly, Jub Jub, in the fourth. The bay daughter of Boo Jum, ridden by Jimmy Stout, gradually reached contention and wore down Rafter at the end to register by a half length. The Jacobs miss paid her backers $23.60 for $2 and covered the 6 furlongs in 1:12 flat.

Emir Wins Third Race.

Axwell Howard's remarkably improved 3-year-old gelding Emir, which is trained by the former jockey idol, Earl Sande, raced to his third triumph in as many local efforts in the sixth contest. Emir, which apparently thrives on tropical sun, won his first start here at six furlongs when entered for $1,100. He repeated at the same distance in $1,500 competition and today, entered for $2,000, he came from behind over the mile and a sixteenth route and scored by a half length over Bijuro, with Speed, the favorite, third, a length behind. Emir was a 5 to 1 shot.

Terpsichore won her second straight purse and Irving Anderson, who tops the local riders to date, scored a double in the seventh event. Sheknows was second, a length back and three lengths in advance of Maid of Arches. Terpsichore lacked early foot. Anderson urged the filly into a contending position around the last bend. Terpsichore then ran over Sheknows and Maid of Arches in the last furlong to win going away. She paid $11.20.

Wheat Breaks With Rumor of Lower Tariff

December Closed 4 5/8 Cents Under Prices for Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Jarred by apparently unfounded rumors that the United States will reduce wheat import duties, wheat late today fell almost 6 cents from a seven-year peak. This was the last day on which new trading in December delivery could be done, and the severest tumble of prices took place in contracts for that delivery.

Despite Washington denials that a slash in duties was at all probable, enough wheat selling was precipitated to reverse the market trend to a radical extent, with the close at the day's bottom level.

At the close, wheat was 1 1/8@4 5/8 cents under Saturday's finish. December, 137 1/4@137 1/2; May, 135 1/8@135 3/8; July, 118 1/2@118 5/8. The provisions outcome was 15 to 40 cents bulge.

Steel Records Likely to Fall In Coming Year

New York, Dec. 28.—"Most of the peaks in the steel industry which have been unmatched since 1929 seem destined to fall during 1937," Dun & Bradstreet say today. Their review says:

"With production maintained above the 4,000,000-ton mark for five of the elapsed 11 months of 1936 and the steel ingot operating ratio at a seven-year high, the surge of buying since November has expanded backlogs beyond any comparative records in peacetime history. Most of the mills will be forced to skip the usual year-end shutdowns, except for brief periods required to make deferred repairs and to install new equipment for the higher schedules planned.

"Showing a gain of 80.5 per cent over the 1934 comparative tonnage, and 40.0 per cent over that of 1935, steel ingot production for the 11 months of 1936 amounted to 42,487,717 gross tons, according to the statistics compiled by the American Iron and Steel Institute. When compared with the annual average of 41,500,000 gross tons for the 10-year period ended with 1929, this represented a rise of 2.4 per cent. With the fast pace of December operations, total production for 1936 has been estimated at around 47,000,000 gross tons, the largest since 1929 at 54,850,000.

Backlogs at Peak.

"Reaching a new peak since 1929, the backlog of orders had become so bulky at mid-December that many mills were forced to allocate as well as to turn down substantial tonnages as impossible of delivery before January 1. Since July, 1935, production each month has been in excess of that of the comparative one of the year preceding, and in October, 1936, went to 4,545,001 gross tons. The latter was the greatest for any month since August, 1929, and was passed in only seven previous months in the industry's history.

"Production for November was only slightly lower at 4,337,412, which brought the total for the 11 months of 1936 to 42,487,717 gross tons. In addition to going 40 per cent over the 1935 comparative of 30,344,600 and 80.5 per cent over that of 1934, output for the 11 months of 1936 was ahead of the 12-month totals for both of those years. Annual capacity in the steel industry in 1936 was based on calculations of 68,475,500 gross tons of open-hearth and Bessemer steel ingots, against 68,849,717 in 1935."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Yield in Moderately Active Trading; Wheat Has Sharp Setback.

New York, Dec. 28.

On sales volume at the usual rate of around 2,000,000 shares the stock market drifted irregularly lower. Tax selling was reported to be only moderate, but there was little inclination to take positions on the bull side. Government bonds worke da little lower. Speculative issues attracted some attention. Numerous commodities rose, but wheat after an early gain had a fall. May futures closed 1 1/4 cents lower at 135 3/8 cents a bushel.

While the psychological mood of the financial district was not favorable to fresh purchases of stocks on a broad scale, the business developments over the holiday were as bullish as could be expected at this time of year. The steel industry this week, it was estimated by the American Iron & Steel Institute, will continue at last week's rate of 77 per cent of capacity, which means that the new year will open with one of the country's major industries running at boom time proportions for this season.

The activity in steel throws into sharp relief the contrasts in various industries, some of which have not got far out of depression and some of which are so active as to suggest the building up of inventories. Possibly that is being done here and there where labor difficulties are threatened, but the fact is that consumption of steel is large, in spite of the comparative stagnation in residential and business construction. Part of the demand probably is coming from those who are going to use steel, but who fear higher prices. To the extent that may be true, some of the usual demand in the next three months will have been satisfied this year.

Signs Sometimes Fail.

Momentum of business promises to carry through a few months at least, regardless of what may happen when Congress meets. Realization of the growing tendency of Government to interfere with the natural forces of industry and commerce is nevertheless a market offset to the recognized indices. It may be comparatively simple to figure what earnings and money rates are going to be, and therefore what stocks and bonds ought to be worth from reading the signposts that have served in the past. Uncertainty lies in the fact that all signs may be changed at any time.

Credit Steps.

Gilt-edged bonds and the money market are waiting to see what the next step will be in credit management. It is assumed that the Treasury will follow its gold sterilization with another cut in excess bank reserves by means of lifting the reserves requirements. Meanwhile gold continues to come in, the price of wheat is high and strong, and sterling is being kept at a high level. Commodities in general are showing strength, and some of them—particularly rubber, sugar, copper and oil—are attracting more attention, speculative and otherwise, than has been the case in many years.

Luring Gold.

No one in this part of the country at least even pretends to know exactly what the Treasury is doing with its foreign exchange stabilization fund, nor what it intends to do. The public has been given only generalities with respect to the desirability of having a stable dollar and high commodity prices, while much concern quite evidently is felt just now among the authorities at Washington over the amount of floating foreign capital in our markets and the further influx, shown principally in the gold imports.

Threats are heard that a curb may be placed by means of special taxes, and altogether the matter of worry over a credit inflationary boom that may take place, to say nothing of fears for withdrawal of funds already here and consequently a drop in prices of securities or tightening of money, strikes the observer as excessive, in view of the fact that the country is still in a depression, all things considered. The objects or our credit policy as officially hinted seems praiseworthy on the surface, but it is not so easy to find logical explanations for them.

Inconsistency.

Sterling continues above $4.90 to the pound. Today's price was a quarter of a cent higher at $4.91 1/2. Gold and silver are coming this way. It is not to be assumed that our stabilization fund is exchanging dollars for gold and silver and thereby maintaining the pound sterling. Many believe that the dollar is undervalued, and there can be little doubt but that undervalued dollars and overvalued sterling—all the result of management rather than of a seeking natural levels dictated by trade balances and prices—make it certain that capital will flow into the low currency, i. e., dollars. If that situation is to be deplored, it seems inconsistent that the dollar managers should help to maintain it.

Perhaps after Congress meets and the new Administration begins the country will be favored with a clear statement on credit policy. It could do no harm and at least would have the charm of novelty.

Cash Sales.

Tomorrow will ge the last day for selling stocks on regular third-day delivery. After that, in order to have the sale counted as a 1936 transaction, it will have to be made for cash, which usually brings a price discount from the quotation for regular delivery. Cash sales, nevertheless, always are fairly numerous on the last two days of the year, as many hold off, partly through neglect and partly because they hope the last day's prices will be more favorable to their purpose. Most of the late cash sales are made for the purpose of establishing losses for income tax deductions.

Market Prices.

Taking into account stock splitups, many issues now on the Stock Exchange are selling, or sold some time this year, above the best levels reached in 1929. The firm of Paine, Webber & Co. have prepared a list of 56 such stocks, all but one (Omnibus Corporation) paying dividends. Those stocks are showing market prices of from 8 to 40 times earnings, but the majority seem to be on a more conservative price to earnings ratio than was the case in 1929. At any rate, as the firm points out, what is a proper yardstick, and who is to determine the future trend of earnings?

War-Scare Buying Lifts Commodities

New York, Dec. 28 (AP).—A wave of speculative and "war scare" buying sent a long list of commodities to the highest price levels of years today, some of them establishing eight-year peaks. It was the broadest single advance in many months, with export copper and copper futures, and futures in lead, cocoa, crude rubber, raw silk, cottonseed oil, raw hides, sugar and grains participating in the upward surge. Toward the end of the day there was some profit taking and in a few instances, notably the grains, prices were lower at the close. Most of the list, however, ended at near the day's best figures.

Brockway Truck Files Petition

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 28.—Proceedings for the reorganization of Brockway Motor Truck Corporation under the provisions of Section 77b of the national bankruptcy act have been instituted by the filing of a petition by that corporation in the United States District Court for the North District of New York.

Attorneys for the corporation stated that the court today approved the petition and continued the corporation in possession of its properties, pending a hearing of creditors and stockholders to be held at a later date. A plan of reorganization is being developed which is expected to be filed in the near future.

On September 1, 1932, Brockway Motor Truck Corporation's assets were sold or leased to Brockway Motor Co., Inc., a new company. George S. Piroumoff, president, stated that his company was in a strong financial condition, was not a party to the reorganization proceedings, and that therefore its operations should not in any way be affected.

Bache Sees Gain For Coming Year

Expressing the belief that the great gains made during the year 1936 will not only be held but that further moderate progress will be evidenced as the year unfolds itself, the New York Stock Exchange firm of J. S. Bache & Co., in its New Year's greetings to its clients adopts a constructive attitude for the coming year and states that "we feel encouraged by the outlook and enter 1937 with confidence."

"With the passing of the year 1936 it is well worth looking back and reviewing the forebodings with which many economists viewed the advent of that year," the letter states. "A new era has been ushered in, bringing as it did unknown innovations, the results raising numerous doubts in many minds."

FluctuationDue In Wheat Price During Winter

Supply Is Smallest in 10 Years, but Bumper Crop Predicted.

By the Associated Press.

Wide swings in the price of wheat in the next few months were forecast by Government grain experts yesterday as prices for this chief bread grain reached a seven-year peak at Chicago and then dropped 6 cents a bushel.

A scramble among European nations to buy wheat and the fact that the world supply is the smallest in ten years, were said by the Government experts to have sent prices upward recently.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported that new estimates by it indicated ample reserves to care for all demands.

Prices Will Fluctuate.

But the bureau added that "with unsettled conditions in Europe, prices are likely to fluctuate more than usually."

Looking ahead to the next wheat crop, the Federal economists said the United States probably would harvest more grain than could be consumed in this country. A decline in prices was viewed as the likely result.

The estimated winter wheat acreage of 57,187,000 acres in this country was said to be 15 per cent larger than last fall, 26 per cent larger than the recent five-year average and well above the previous peak of 51,381,000 acres planted in the fall of 1918.

Taking into account the dry summer and unfavorable fall weather, a winter wheat harvest of more than 600,000,000 bushels was seen likely.

Expansion Foreseen.

A general expansion of wheat production next season in important prod[illegible] areas of the world is indicat[illegible] the bureau said.

Its estimate of world wheat supplies for the 1936-37 season was 4,225,000,000 bushels. This compared with a 4,507,000,000 bushels last season.

Available surplus supplies of wheat were estimated by the bureau at about 680,000,000 for this marketing season, and total world demands by importingff countries at 590,000,000. The survey said this would leave 90,000,000 bushels of wheat for carry-over stocks in exporting countries or to build reserves in importing nations.

Limitation on American Films Modified by Italy

Rome, (Tuesday) Dec. 9.—The Italian government today modified its sweeping legislation against foreign motion pictures which, film men asserted, had threatened to block further imports of American pictures.

By the new ruling, distributors of American films are permitted to import 250 instead of 49 films annually and they may take 22,000,000 lire ($1,157,200) of their annual revenue out of Italy and spend the rest in Italy without regard to the Italian film industry.

Motion picture distributors gave credit for the modification to Will Hays, United States motion picture co-ordinator, who conferred with Premier Benito Mussolini and other Fascist officials last November.

Mother of Ten Goes to Police After Slaying

Woman Arranges for Care of Children Prior to Surrender.

By the Associated Press.

Logan, W. Va., Dec. 28.— Police Chief Jeff B. Watts said today that Mrs. Emily Watkins, 44, the mother of ten children, confessed she shot and killed Ben Gayhart, 57, at her home at Dingess, Mingo County.

Mrs. Watkins claimed self-defense.

With two other women who had driven with her over the mountains from her home, Mrs. Watkins walked into Watts' office and told him of the shooting.

"Mrs. Watkins told me that Gayhart was an unwelcome visitor at her home," Watts said, "and that when he refused to leave, she armed herself with a pistol. She said there was a scule duringwhich the pistol was discharged. Then she said she fired two more shots and Gayhart fell to the floor and died in a few minutes."

The woman then arranged for neighbors to take care of her children and drove on here.

At Williamson, Prosecutor J. Walter Copley, of Mingo County, asked State troopers to bring the woman there.

Bond Ordinance Taken Before Supreme Court

Richmond, Dec. 28 (AP).—The town council of New Market asked the State Supreme Court of Appeals today for a writ of mandamus to compel Mayor C. A. Woods to sign and Clerk J. K. Wicker to certify a recent ordinance providing for refunding town bonds.

The petition, directed at clearing up a question of the constitutionality of the issue, said the bonds to be refunded were issued to secure funds to build a water system. The council admitted that the refunding issue would be in excess of 18 per cent of the assessed valuation of real estate of the locality—the maximum prescribed by an amendment to the State constitution in 1928, but declared that at the time of the original issue the 18-per cent limitation did not prevail.

SEC Expected To Ask Trusts Be Segregated

Likely to Urge Legislation; Hearings Due Today on Buffalo Firm.

By the Associated Press.

Legislation completely separating the $2,000,000,000 investment trust business from other forms of finance probably will be recommended to Congress by the Securities Commission.

Nearing the end of a long study of investment trusts and their methods of doing business, the commission will begin hearings today on activities of the Liberty Shares Corporation of Buffalo.

The investigation was ordered by Congress to determine whether the investment trust business should be regulated, and, if so, how.

On the basis of evidence already in the record, commission officials were said to have reached the conclusion already that regulation is needed, and to be now exploring methods.

A recommendation for legislation segregating investment trusts from banks, brokerage firms and other business was said to have been virtually decided upon as one, but only one, step in a general plan.

The record of the investigation holds evidence that investment trusts have been organized by banks and subsequently have taken unsalable stock off the banks' hands, bought in the banks' loans, borrowed from the banks and engaged in other practises.

Officials contend there is evidence, too, that some brokerage houses have formed investment trusts principally to benefit from commissions derived from handling the trusts' account, with the latter engaging in frequent and numerous transactions.

Officials estimate that at the 1929 peak, from five to eight billion dollars were invested in investment trusts. They set the present day figure at two to three billions.

The hearing on the Liberty Shares Corporation of Buffalo, is expected to take two to three days. George D. Kleindinst, president of the corporation during much of the period covered by the commission's study and now president of the Liberty Bank, is expected to be the principal witness.

Gov. Smith Faces New Bank Charges

Rutland, Vt., Dec. 28 (AP).—Vermont authorities today took another tack in their effort to convict Gov. Charles M. Smith and three others in the Marble Savings Bank embezzlement case by arresting them on new charges.

Gov. Smith, president of the bank; Lathrop H. Baldwin, treasurer, and Samuel A. Howard and Bert L. Stafford, trustees, pleaded innocent to charges of failure to make semiannual audits of the bank's books and to report the defalcations of a former bookkeeper.

The charges were the outcome of conviction of John J. Cocklin, the former bookkeeper, for the embezzlement of $121,000. Cocklin is now in prison. Prior charges that the Governor concealed Cocklin's thefts are still pending.
